	90 minutes	I ask each child to draw their favorite work with the paint application and then create a digital painting together with all the drawings.
Assessment	30 minutes	Through the observations made during the proposed activities and photographic documentation of the activities carried out, excellent participation of the entire section was noted. The children showed enthusiasm and interest in all the topics covered. In fact, the free and guided conversations highlighted a marked emotional involvement both towards the dynamics relating to the world of work that surrounds them and towards personal future expectations. All this therefore allowed all the children to easily achieve their set objectives.

Conclusions and Recommendations
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● The topic covered undoubtedly represents a topic that has always fascinated the child's imagination. ● Involving children in activities linked to both the present and the future makes them active protagonists and therefore highly motivated. Motivation is the basis of good participation 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> ● Always starting from careful observation during the dynamics that are created in the small and large group allows the teacher to put the children at ease and to modulate the activities based on the objectives achieved and those still to be achieved. ● Involving children in games, singing and dancing, even with the help of

which represents the springboard for rapid and peaceful learning.	digital technology, leads them to get involved first hand. <ul style="list-style-type: none">● Encouraging them to engage in dialogue, conversation and the sharing of different ideas enriches them, positively strengthening their identity and consequently their self-esteem.
